This is a dual role play where I will begin as a historian and contrast that role to the focus of an archeologists from the Paleolithic era that students have recently studied.

The major role will be as a Delaware Native American woman who shares her people's heritage and history in Ohio. This will include a replica costume.

Both primary source and replicas artifacts will be shared. In addition connections will be made to the impending French and Indian War.

Teachers will previously receive an email with pictures and organizers for students to use both during and after the role play.

Students questions will be encouraged.
